

For the prevention and cure of
BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS
is recommended
HAILM'S ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS
THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly gratifying to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once or every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

"O Father, dear father! lament now with me,

This morning I've been at our wood,

A WOODEN-LEGGED COW.

One of the fore legs of a cow, the property of Mr. Little, of Herresford, in Cornwall, was accidentally broken some time ago, and Mr. Little being unwilling to kill it, had the leg amputated just below the knee-joint, and the part being perfectly healed, a pad and leg were braced on, and the poor animal now walks about, lies down, and rises with much facility.

[Foreign Paper.

This is nothing to the story of the New-England Cow, who, when her sight began to fail her, was by her benevolent master, accommodated with a pair of Spectacles. It was said that the sight of the poor animal was no much improved by this experiment, that she could actually see to stitch ribands.

[Federal Republican.

A HARD CASE.

What can please the Democrats, we know not, for some of their Editors appear to be just as vindictive against the Federal party for having given up opposition to President Monroe, as they formerly were, because the Federal party opposed their candidate. Surely if they were right in their clamours against the Federal party formerly, they are bound to suspend their hostility now. We once heard of a man who complained grievously of his matrimonial alterations—at length his wife, tired by his incessant altercations, responded amen to every syllable that he uttered. At this proof of concession, the husband became perfectly outrageous, and addressing his wife, exclaimed, "my dear, I shall certainly die if we don't have our old quarrels again." [ibid.]

EXTRAORDINARY INSTANCE OF ANIMAL KINDNESS.

In the menagerie of Brussels there is a lion called Danco, whose cell was lately in want of some repairs. His keeper desired a carpenter to set about them: but when the workman came and saw the lion, he drew back with terror. The keeper entered the animal's cell, and led him to the upper part of it while the lower was fitting. He there amused himself for sometime, playing with the lion, and therefore undress too!!!

being wearied, soon fell asleep. The carpenter fully relying upon the vigilance of the keeper, pursued his work, anxious, it may be supposed, to have done with it as soon as possible. When he had finished he called William, the keeper, to see what he had done, but William made no answer. Having repeatedly called in vain, he began to feel alarmed at his silence, and he determined to go to the upper part of the cell, where looking through the railing he saw the lion and the keeper sleeping side by side, and immediately uttered a loud cry. The lion, awaked by the noise, started up and darted at the carpenter with an eye of fury, and then placing his paw on the breast of his keeper, he lay down to sleep again. The poor carpenter was dreadfully frightened, and not knowing how he could rouse up William, he ran out and related what he saw. Some of the attendants of the house came and opened the door, which the carpenter had secured with several bars, and contrived to awake the keeper, who upon opening his eyes, did not appear the least apprehensive on account of the situation in which he found himself. He took the paw of the lion, and shook it gently in token of regard and the animal quietly returned with him to its former residence.

AN ADDRESS TO A PROUD MAN.

You, sir, are proud of your rank, your person, your personal accomplishments, and the abilities of your mind. Observe that infant sitting on the nurse's lap, and wanting all her care; its little head lies sunk upon its breast, and it is unconscious of every thing around. Such you was, who now strut so proudly, and talk so loudly.

Behold that old man who sits in the corner of the room. He is as helpless as the child, his head sink on his breast, his eyes are fixed, his mind is gone, yet he was as young, as handsome, as accomplished, as learned as yourself; he was the pride of the youth of his day.—Such as he is now you may be.

You seem somewhat moved by these objects; step with me to the next room—Look into that coffin.—You start back with horror; active and vigorous as you are now, as inactive, as insignificant, as loathsome as the body within will you lie, and incapable of resistance you will be placed in your Coffin, perhaps by those very servants, who now tremble at your sight, and dread your call—you will moulder into dust—and that head which is now your glory, to-morrow will be the sport of the Sexton, whilst he throws up your dust with his dirty spade. Be ashamed then, be a man, and clothe yourself with a man's best ornament—Humbley.

ANECDOTE.

The following anecdote is related in a letter from the southward.—One Frog, a tailor, who had left Charleston, S.C. at the commencement of the revolutionary war, returned soon after the capitulation, and got acquainted with one J. W. Gibbs, who was requested by Frog to stand as god-father to one of his children, which was agreed to by Gibbs, provided he should have the naming of the child. As they were going to church, the father asked Gibbs if he had thought of a name. Yes, says Gibbs, what think you of our Lieutenant Bull? we'll name the child after him. Very good, says the father, I approve of it much. The child was accordingly named Bull. Frog did not immediately think of the drollery of the name, but when he did, he could have killed Gibbs for such an imposition.

On his reliance and friendship, however, he thought to have recourse to the Board of Police to get permission to re-baptize the child; but when he saw the lieutenant Governor there presiding, he thought it would be an affront to relate his story, therefore he postponed the matter, and the child remains under the appellation of Bull Frog.

CURIOS CONVERSATION.

A curious conversation lately took place on board one of the Margate boys, which being overheard, occasioned small merriment among the passengers. A gentleman who was totally unacquainted with the customs of these vessels, remained on deck till all the cabins were doubly occupied, one excepted, in which was a lady. He addressed himself to her: "Pray, Madam, be so kind as to make room for me." "Good God, Sir! You cannot come here, go to the other cabin!"—"I have, Madam, and I find they are all full!"—"It is impossible to admit you here, for I am undressed."—"Well, Madam, I swear to take an advantage of you; I will

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1817.

Mr. BOSTON,

Hearing that the government are about to erect fortifications on Old Point Comfort, I herewith send you an extract from "General Wilkinson's Memoirs," of the opinions of several gentlemen of the British navy relative to that place; also, general Wilkinson's ideas on the subject of water batteries generally:

"On the subject of water batteries I will offer another sentiment, which may be found worthy examination. It is, that no fortification can resist the attack of ships of the line when their respective batteries are nearly on a level, and the distance within grape and canister range, because of the condensation of the fire and the cover of the combatants on ship board; and it is an equally sound maxim, that when vessels of war cannot approach to point blank distance, the advantage will be on the side of the land battery. The following report may, in some shape, help to illustrate my ideas."

"Copy of the opinions of the commanders of H. M. ships in the Chesapeake, relative to Old Point Comfort, dated Richmond, Hampton Roads, July 26th, 1781.

"My Lord,—In consequence of a requisition that your lordship received from the commanders in chief of his majesty's troops and ships, relative to a post being established at Old Point Comfort, for the protection and security of the king's ships that may occasionally be sent to the Chesapeake, we, whose names are hereunto subscribed, have taken as accurate a survey as possible, and are unanimous of opinion, from the width of the channel and depth of water close to it, that any superior enemy's force coming in may pass any work that can be established there with little damage, or destroy it, with the ships that may be there under its protection.

LATEST FROM AMELIA.

We have seen a gentleman who left Amelia Island on the 20th inst. who informs us that Governor Hubbard died on Sunday last, of a fever, after a few days illness; and that the greatest confusion reigned on the island. It was not known when our informant left Amelia, who would succeed Hubbard, or how matters would be arranged. Two prizes and a privateer from the coast of Africa, went into Amelia on Saturday last. Large quantities of prize goods were to have been sold last week; but in consequence of the disturbance between Aury and Irwin, the sale was put off.

A HOPEFUL FAMILY.

We are informed (says the New-Bedford Mercury of the 21st inst.) that at the Supreme Judicial Court, now sitting at Taunton, in this county, Malbone Briggs, of Freetown, and four of his sons, were indicted for various offences—three of his sons have been tried, convicted, and sent to the state's prison, one of them for six years.

SINGULAR CIRCUMSTANCE.

A few nights since, (says a Portsmouth paper of Oct. 25) a girl of 12 years, living in the house of Tobias Walker, Esq. was much distressed in her sleep with the idea that robbers had broken into the house. She immediately arose, threw open the window of a third story chamber in which she lodged, and dropped to the ground. She ran a considerable distance to the house of her mother, whom she aroused, and related her story before she awoke. Though she appeared to suffer but little injury from the fall at first, her feet have since become much swollen, so that she is unable to walk.

SPONGE.

Naturalists have been much embarrassed to determine whether to range sponge in the animal or vegetable family. Some imagined it to be a concretion of sea mud; others have commonly supposed it to be a vegetable production; but it is now allowed to be, like the corallines, of animal origin, being the fabric and habitation of some species of worm or polype.

The greater part of our sponges are bro-from the Mediterranean, especially from

Nicar, an island near the coast of Asia, west of Samos. Mr. Savary, in his "Letters on Greece," mentions Syra or Simon, an island north of Rhodes, as famous for sponges. They grow in abundance round the island; and this fishery, he adds, is the only support of its inhabitants. Men, women and children, all know how to dive, and plunge into the sea in search of the oily patrimony bestowed on them by nature; for the island, which is merely a rock of small extent, extremely stony, produces neither grain nor fruit.

P. Current at Havre de Grace, Sept. 12

Since our last advices respecting our cotton market, it has somewhat fluctuated, and was in the space of 5 weeks in a situation of considerable calm; it is now however again brisk and prices maintain themselves well as follows:—48 a 52 for Georgia, Upland even 55 for very fine quality; 53 a 55 a 56 for New Orleans; 38 for Sea Island, the actual stock of cotton in this port is namely:

Ab. 1690 bales G. Upland.

1575 ditto New Orleans.

55 ditto Sea Island.

5855 ditto S. & K. Bengal.

5295 ditto Brazil.

7.7 ditto other sorts.

Together a P., 5865 bales.

The sales during the last month have been considerable, say about 3000 bales.

and the provision of U. S. cotton is certainly not important, but still we are astonished that prices support themselves thus, when we reflect that the manufacturers are selling their goods under prime cost. We cannot but expect, that towards the close of this year, and especially when the new crop begins to arrive, prices will be lower, but at the same time we are of opinion that cotton will always continue the most profitable export from you continent.

Pot ashes are higher, and may be quoted at 62 50 duty paid, or 51 in bond, but still the stock is large, and we would by no means recommend shipments for the present.

Tobacco.—There will be, it seems to be ascertained, no other concours of the regie this year, therefore the business done in that article must be for exportation, transit, or on speculation. As with ashes, we certainly would request our friends not to repeat their shipments till the last stock on hand is somewhat reduced.

Rice may be quoted at 43 for fine new Carolina—none in the market.

Fish oil 65 a 66, but not a good article, as the tare allowed to the trade is 20, and the duty is charged on the gross wt. without any deduction for tare at the custom-house.

American 6 stock in London 106 a 107 new stock. Deferred stock none or very scarce.

By the brig Henrico, Capt. Luce, arrived in this port last evening, in 27 days from Dublin, we are favored with the Dublin Evening Post of the 27th Sept.

The only article of importance which we can discover is an official announcement that the Bank of England will resume specie payments after the 1st instant.

Bullock, Sept. 27.

The mail which became due this morning has not arrived, and the wind continues adverse, blowing a stormy gale in the West.

I do hereby direct, that there be inserted forthwith in the London Gazette, the following notice from the Governor and company of the bank of England, dated 18th Sept. 1817, namely:

That on and after the 1st October next, the Bank will be ready to pay cash for their notes of every description, dated prior to the 1st January, 1817.

New-York, Oct. 29.

Dublin, Septem.
SPANISH AMERICA.

One of our London letters, received this morning, says—

"We noticed the other day that the raising of recruits in this country for the Patriots in South America was going on with considerable rapidity. Colonels Hippesly and Skeene are named amongst the officers now raising regiments for S. America."

A new revolution in the Brazils.—Letters received on Saturday from Paraná state the important intelligence, that an insurrection had broken out at Pará, about 80 leagues to the north of that place. It was reported that a foreign vessel had arrived at Pará with military stores and 3,000 stand of arms, which were immediately paid for in specie by the insurgents.

The ship Ontario.—This fine vessel sails to day from the port of Dublin full of passengers. She is one of the best and fastest sailing vessels in the trade, her passage from and to New-York have been really extraordinary. She has been three times across the Atlantic this season; twice from New-York to Dublin, and once from Dublin to New-York, and during the whole of the three trips she was only 78 days at sea.

London, September 18.

The East India Company, having given notice that the interest on their bonds will be reduced from 5 to 4 per cent, interest per annum, has produced a great sensation in the money market. The bonds which formerly commanded a premium of 120 and 132, are offering at about 50; but we believe no purchases have been made this morning. The reports circulated in this city are, that the chancellor of the exchequer will very shortly bring forward bills at 2d, bearing an interest of about 5 per cent, per annum. These changes in government securities are expected to have a very favorable effect on the funds. Consols for the account, at 1 o'clock, were 80 3-8.

September 19.

At 1 o'clock to day consols were 79 7-8. By accident we yesterday described the exchequer bills, which it is reported to be the intention of government to issue, as at 2d instead of at 2d. The accompanying statement of the annual interest must, however, have prevented this error from misleading any one.

The papers received by a Dutch mail state that the neighborhood of Batavia, in the island of Java, had suffered from the eruptions of a burning mountain, and that this phenomenon had been attended with all the accompaniments of an earthquake. The waters rose to an unusual height, and trees were thrown down from the mountains. Two other mountains sunk into the earth, carrying with them their unfortunate inhabitants.

CONTINUATION OF THE STORY OF MENOUF.

When the dawn of recollection again burst upon his mind, he perceived a change in his situation. He was in a cottage, surrounded by strangers whose countenances seemed full of anxiety for him. They informed him, that wandering by chance along the shore, they had perceived him as he lay extended on his cold bed of sand: that they had removed him to a comfortable lodging, dressed his wounds, and endeavored to restore him to life, in which they succeeded, only however to behold him rave in the agony of delirium for several months together. He heard their relation with horror. He contemplated the dreadful blank in his existence; the last scenes he remembered, rushed upon his mind; he thought of the old man's disappearance; and was lost in a maze of unutterable perplexity.

As his health slowly recovered its former strength, he endeavored to gain some information of the country in which he was. Though the inhabitants were Musulmen, and spoke nearly the same language with himself, yet the name of the country was one of which he had never so much as heard: and all that they seemed to know of Arabia was, that it was a distant country to the north-west, and the birth-place of their prophet. They told him that their own country was exceedingly rich and powerful; that the kingdom was founded many hundred years ago by a descendant of the Genii, and that its dominion extended over twenty nations. They spoke with rapturous enthusiasm of their prince, who had just succeeded to the throne, a station which he seemed destined to fill with glory and renown.

Wearied of idleness, as soon as his health permitted him, Menouf joined the army of the country, which was then on its march to subdue a Pagan enemy. Visions of untold glory floated before his sight, and with returning health came the ambition and the discontent he had formerly possessed. Though he entered as a common soldier, his conduct and his courage soon raised him to a higher rank. Successing events realized the expectations which had been formed of him, and having risen from grade to grade, a large army of the enemy was decisively defeated by his exertions. The sovereign created him his general and prime vizier; and Menouf, in the growing grandeur of his lot, began to forget his sufferings as an obscure character, and his hardships as a soldier, lost in speculations on the probable end of his advancing career.

Peace was soon re-established, and the glory and reputation of Menouf continually tarnished. High in the confidence of his sovereign, he endeavored to promote the welfare of the empire which he was called to assist by his counsels. Whenever he appeared respect was paid to his presence, and to his words; and the people congratulated themselves on the possession of such a vizier with such a king.

One day, as he returned from the Diwan, he suddenly observed the old man who had been his guide awaiting him on the steps of his palace. The latter saluted him; but he, filled with resentment for the past, reproached him with his desertion, and boasted to him that he had succeeded in his undertaking far better since he had been alone. The old man bore his taunts without a murmur, till he had concluded. He then exclaimed—

"Providence, O Menouf! is dark and mysterious in its dealings. Thy weak and mortal eye cannot fathom its designs. Thou mayest despise my counsels, but thy end will prove their truth. Beware—thine own footsteps will lead thee to ruin. Take however, this talisman, which in the earthquake which separated us, I seized from its dwelling place of fire. So long as thou persevest in the path of virtue, this amethyst will exert such an influence over thy mind as to lead thee in the right way; but remember, too confident Menouf, that if thou soferest for a moment the seeds of crime, and goest in the paths of unwarantable ambition, it will warp thine intellect and pervert thy judgment. Use it with circumspection. From the future's dark prospect we may not strip the veil; but once again I warn thee—BEWARE!"—Menouf turned; to reply, but the old man had disappeared.

It was in vain he endeavored to trace the fugitive. He now regretted that he had offended him, and wished to recall every thing he had said. Under the influence of these virtuous feelings, he felt himself strongly instigated to acts of high and exemplary virtue. The love and admiration he had excited were daily increased, and he felt the value of the old man's gift.

Thus far all went well; till once when he had happened to have laid his talisman aside for a moment, he was immediately called to an audience of a person who was extremely anxious to speak to him. The gem was forgotten. He found one of the nobles of the court waiting for him, who by degrees, and with caution, made several complaints against the conduct of the king. He said he had been induced to apply to the vizier, by the conversation of an old man who appeared infinitely acquainted with his character. Menouf started from his seat, and Bardissi, the nobleman, remarking his confusion, described his informant in such a manner as to leave no doubt upon Menouf's mind who he was, adding, that he had departed from the country. He then dropped hints of a rebellion—of depositing the king. The black drop of Menouf's heart throbbed as Bardissi spoke.

Menouf started from his seat, and Bardissi, the nobleman, remarking his confusion, described his informant in such a manner as to leave no doubt upon Menouf's mind who he was, adding, that he had departed from the country. He then dropped hints of a rebellion—of depositing the king. The black drop of Menouf's heart throbbed as Bardissi spoke.

A few days saw Menouf the blackest of traitors. Bardissi engaged to destroy the king by poison; and the unsuspecting monarch fell a victim to their treachery. As the actors in this dreadful tragedy kept out of sight, the popular voice proclaimed Menouf king, and he was crowned amid the acclamations of deluded thousands, who fondly imagined that they had placed upon the throne, one whose wisdom would surpass that of any former sovereign.

He acted the hypocrite for several months, till his power was fully established. He then found that the power for which he had ever so anxiously longed, was immense; that his treasures and resources were almost inexhaustable.

The tyrant then came out. The hand of oppression laid its iron rod on all. The people groaned beneath their burthens, and the nobles felt the weight of the tyranny he imposed upon them. The principles of virtue he once possessed were now entirely forgotten; and instead of decent magnificence, which the enthusiasm of his people had at first bestowed, he received the odious appellation of Menouf the oppressor.

The standard of rebellion was raised, and he vainly strove to cope with the rising energies of a nation. His general, Bardissi, was defeated and slain, and a few days beheld the gloomy, exulting, powerful Menouf, bound in the solitude of a dungeon. A bowl of poison had been left for him to drink.

As he lay there, he remembered once more the talisman, and filled with harkening reflection, he threw it from him. The beans of supernatural insinuation had always played around it now brightened into a blaze of intolerable glory. Menouf grasped the bowl of poison, in the conclusion of the moment when a voice he flander came from the burning apes-trees, and the form of the genius Zedonian stood again revealed. "Desist," said he sternly, "from crowning thy crimes with suicide. Thou artest for power, and thou hast received it. In the form of the old man I led thee through anguish-suffering hoping to wean thee from thy restless ambition. I brought thee after a servitude of sorrow, and yet thou wast not humbled. The talisman I gave thee only hastened the desires and the conduct which would certainly have taken place at a more distant period. I instigated Bardissi to his enterprise, but he would have done it himself on a future occasion. The king, whom you imagined dead, was only stupefied by the effect of an opiate of long duration, which I substituted for the poison. The attendants of the sepulchres of the king have discovered him awake. Dust thou nothear the shouts of the populace?"

They are coming to tear thy body to pieces, and to scatter thy ashes to the winds of heaven!"

The sound of an enraged populace now drew near. Menouf shrieked in terror. "I will save thee," said the genius; "I will substitute another form blotted with poison, for thine; whilst thou shalt be removed to the abode of thy father, (to whom I have revealed thy history,) to pass the remainder of thy days in peace, and to profit by the dreadful lesson which thou hast received. Go; and learn to repine no more, and to sigh no longer after that power which thou art unable to use with discretion, and which thou wast not born to wield!"

The roar approached nearer to the dungeon. The genius struck him with his wand. A pang of intense agony shot through his frame; but when that was past, he looked around him, and beheld the rocks and the valleys of his father's abode.

The story of Menouf is recorded by his own desire on the annals of his kingdom. Hear, and be wise, O ye, who sign like him after the grandeur Allah has forbidden to your lot, lest, also, like the infatuated Menouf, ye be plunged into the excesses of crime, and be doomed to feel the agonies of remorse!—ALHAMDO LILLAH! To Allah be the praise!
